Fight every crisis – Global perspectives of a Post-Corona-Economy

Society is confronted with multiple crises: Poverty, inequalities, biodiversity loss, the global climate crisis and the corona pandemic interact and exacerbate each other. At the same time, there is now a worldwide opportunity to overcome economic crises with new creativity and imagination. The coronavirus crisis has brought to light numerous practices of solidarity in finding new forms of social interaction in different contexts in order to deal with instability. These practices can give rise to new narratives for a capacity for action in the face of global crises.

In our digital lecture series, global phenomena are to be considered from multiple perspectives. Innovative narratives and creative forms of actions are to be discovered and researched which question and fundamentally change the old narratives that underlie conventional economic activity. In particular, speakers from the Global South will have their say. The Cusanus Hochschule für Gesellschaftsgestaltung thus makes an academic contribution to the development of a post-corona economy.

How do the corona, poverty and climate crises influence each other? Which economic policy narratives can promote a socio-ecological transformation and enable a good life for all?

Organizational matters

The lecture series will take place from 15th of October 2020 to 11th of February 2021, usually on Thursdays from 2 to 4 pm c.t. (CET) in digital form. There will be opportunities for discussion of the lectures. The lecture series will be directed by Prof. Silja Graupe and is coordinated by Valentin Sagvosdkin (ringvorlesung@cusanus-hochschule.de).

All students of the Cusanus Hochschule für Gesellschaftsgestaltung take part in the lecture series;

it is already integrated into all courses of study. The lectures will be held partly in German, partly in English. In addition, interested citizens and students from other universities take part in the lecture series, which enables them to study safely and innovatively in times of crisis.
